

Dentons Rodyk featured in State of Legal Innovation in the Asia Pacific report

October 7, 2019

Legal and judicial systems are facing disruptions brought about by rapid technological changes around the world. Standing as Singapore's oldest law firm, with nearly 160 years of history, Dentons Rodyk credits its culture of innovation and change – which consists of a focus on ROI, collaboration and openness — as crucial to its successes. In 2017, Dentons Rodyk established a specialised unit to empower practice groups and businesses units to work on client-driven innovations – while ensuring efforts are scalable, measurable and successful. In just two years, the firm is on track to complete over 51 client-driven innovation projects across nearly all its practice and business groups, and is set to become an innovation hub within Dentons, the world's largest law firm.

To provide insights into the focus and activities surrounding legal innovation in various markets, the Singapore Academy of Law's Future Law Innovation Programme ("FLIP") commissioned a study together with the Singapore Management University Law School, and in partnership with Legal Hackers, mapped the "State of Legal Innovation in Asia Pacific" report.

As a firm with a client-centered strategy of innovation and vision of transformation, Global Director - Client Solutions Innovation and Engagement Rocio Perez, Chief Operating Officer and the firm's "Innovation Champion" Loh Kia Meng, along with Senior Partner Gilbert Leong contributed a chapter to the report and shared case studies of Dentons Rodyk's innovation journey.
